Hungry? If you aren't now, you will be after watching the documentary "Pie Lady of Pie Town," which will appear in a fun-filled, family-oriented afternoon session of the Breckenridge Film Festival on Friday, Sept. 19. The film profiles Kathy Knapp, owner of the Pie-O-Neer Café in the small New Mexico burg of Pie Town.

Kathy Knapp was a successful businesswoman in Dallas, Texas, before she decided to leave her charmed life to bake pies in a dusty town with no traffic light or gas station but with plenty of quirky characters.

The film chronicles the Old West history of the area and Kathy's resolve, her heartache, the subsequent healing and how her pies are vehicle for love and peace. The film includes interviews with devoted eaters of Kathy's pies, as well as some finger-snapping tunes.

Director Jane Rosemont said of making the film, "The biggest challenge of all was self-control. Can you imagine
