Tales of the environment

Special to the Daily

Editor's note: This is one in a series of short reviews of films showing at the Breckenridge Film Festival.

Edward Abbey is lauded, rightly so, as the godfather of environmental activism. His words and actions inspired a new generation of environmentalists, from EarthFirst! to more extreme groups such as the Earth Liberation Front.

"Wrenched" is the tale of the modern environmental movement, launched by Abbey in his seminal work "The Monkey Wrench Gang." Through archival footage and interviews with the master himself, "Wrenched" relives sequences from pouring sand into bulldozer gas tanks and cutting down billboards to the FBI investigation that resulted in prison sentences for some of the eco-warriors.

Cinematographer Bryan Reinhart on the set of 'Wrenched,' a film that will be shown at the 2014 Breckenridge Film Festival in September.

Part history, part documentary, and a call to action, "Wrenched" is a must-see for any lover of the American Southwest and those who fight to save its beautiful wildness.

Paired with "Wrenched" in a two-film block at The Village Ten Mile Room at 9 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 20, "Powell to Powell" is a kayak journey on the Colorado River from Lake Powell in Rocky Mountain National Park to Lake Powell in Utah, where the Glen Canyon dam obscures some of the finest natural geology in the world.

Along the way, the filmmakers find the Colorado too shallow to float in spots, speak with farmers and conservationists, run the wild and free river through desert canyons and finally hit the recreational and dwindling waters of America's second largest reservoir.

Welcome fall with a book

Summit Daily staff report
news@summitdaily.com

The Summit County Library is welcoming fall, and snowfall on the mountains, with its adult fall reading program, Goodies for GrownUps. This year's events begin Monday, Sept. 22, with reading bingo at all three library branches.

Stop by the North Branch in Silverthorne, the Main Library in Frisco or the South Branch in Breckenridge and pick up a bingo game card to begin. When you read "A Book That Scares You" or "A Book Your Friend Loves" and complete a row of five boxes on the bingo card, turn it in to receive a small prize, plus an entry into the drawing for one of three prize baskets with gift certificates to Bread & Salt, Boatyard Grill and Butterhorn Bakery. The drawing for the three prize baskets will occur after the Goodies for GrownUps concert on Friday, Nov. 14.

On Saturday, Oct. 18, to kick off the special events and celebrate "Friends of the Library Week," the library presents Reggie Rivers, former Denver Bronco, media personality, motivational speaker and author. Rivers will share "The Tightrope Mentality," which he developed during his NFL career. Rivers energizes the audience with common-sense advice through hilarious stories and thought-provoking lessons of life in the NFL. With his easy style, he delivers a message of hope and optimism.

To get into the Halloween spirit, the Frisco Historic Park & Museum is partnering with the Main Library to present "Nightmare Readings" on Thursday, Oct. 30, beginning at 4 p.m. at the Main Library. Following the readings, all adults are invited to an open house at the Frisco Historic Park & Museum, located at 120 Main St., from 5 to 8 p.m. Light refreshments and self-guided lantern tours will complete the evening. Gothic and Victorian attire is encouraged.

Summit County residents Chris and Ricky Daly present "The Orangutans of Borneo" on Thursday, Nov. 6, at 6:30 p.m. in the Buffalo Mountain Room of the County Commons in Frisco. Hear from the Dalys why orangutans are helping to shape and preserve tropical rain forests.

The program ends on Friday, Nov.
